2014 International Monetary Forum and Press Conference of “RMB Internationalization Report”

On July 20, 2014 International Monetary Forum and Press Conference of "RMB Internationalization Report" was held at Renmin University. The conference was attended by Chen Yulu, president of RUC and editor of the Report; Wei Jianguo, former deputy minister of Commerce; Li Yang, vice president of CASS; Han Wenxiu, deputy director of the Research Department of State Council; Qian Wenhui, vice president of Bank of Communications; Wang Liming, executive vice president of RUC; Anoop Singh, managing director and head of regulatory affairs, former director of IMF Asian and Pacific Department; David Marsh, managing director of OMFIF; Rainer Klump, vice president of Goethe University Frankfurt; Alfred Schipke, IMF Senior Representative in China; and other more than fifty well-known experts, scholars and policy leaders from research institutes, government departments and financial institutions in Europe, America and Asia.

The forum is co-hosted by Renmin University of China and Bank of Communications, sponsored by IMI, and co-sponsored by OMFIF, Goethe University Frankfurt, Korea Institute for International Economic Policy (KIEP), and Fung Global Institute.

The first part of the forum, the opening ceremony and press conference of the Report, was co-chaired by the Dean of School of Finance Guo Qingwang and IMI Director Zhang Jie. Wang Liming and Qian Wenhui delivered opening speeches on behalf of Renmin University of China and Bank of Communications respectively.

The report was interpreted by Chen Yulu. The report themes building and developing RMB offshore market, studies the positive role of offshore currency market in promoting the internationalization of the currency, especially that of RMB. Given the current developments in offshore RMB market, he discussed the practical way of promoting RMB internationalization and rational distribution of the RMB offshore market when capital account is not yet fully open.

After the conference, IMI held an appointment ceremony of new committee members: Rainer Klump, Il Houg Lee (president of KIEP), Liu Jun (vice president of China Everbright Group), David Marsh, Herbert Poenisch (former senior economist at the Bank of International Settlements), Anoop Singh, and Wanda Tseng (former deputy director in the Asia and Pacific Department of IMF).

The second part of the forum is "Roundtable on Money and Finance – 2014 Annual Summit". More than 50 speakers and guests conducted 5 hours of in-depth discussion, centering on reflections on Bretton Woods System: history and future, building and developing RMB offshore market, and RMB internationalization and financial reform in China.

Opening Conference of “RMB Internationalization Report 2015”

On August 28, Opening Conference of “RMB Internationalization Report 2015” was held in Renmin University. Prof. Chen Yulu, editor of the Report, chairman of IMI Academic Committee, president of Renmin University, attended the conference.

Experts and scholars discussed about selected topics, framework and methodology of the Report from both theoretical and practical perspective. The report will focus on RMB internationalization and construction of “Silk Road Economic Belt” and “Maritime Silk Road”.

Prof. Chen Yulu pointed out RMB Internationalization was a vital research. “RMB Internationalization Report” has been recognized by different communities since it was launched. The research team made a huge contribution to its success. The Report should continue with its current academic style, elaborate the relationship between RMB internationalization and “One Belt and One Road”, and emphasize the supporting effects of “currency circulation” on policy, trade and transportation.

IMI Biweekly Forum (No. 11):

Changes in the Financial Regulation in View of the Supply/Demand of Financial Services

On May 11, IMI Biweekly Forum (No. 11) was held at Renmin University. The theme of the forum was “Changes in the financial regulation in view of the supply/demand of financial services”. Professor Zhao Xijun, associate dean of School of Finance delivered a keynote speech on changes in the financial regulation in view of the supply/demand of financial services. He pointed out that we need to break this issue down into three parts: first, to what extent has the demand and supply of financial services and products changed; second, its implication on the traditional regulation, including the regulation ideals, framework, and methods; third, how to deal with this in a right way. Professor Zhao argued that financial regulators need to address several key issues, including too much emphasis on regulating agencies over their functions; supply over demands; administrative supervision over market discipline; harvest over innovation; as well as internal supervision over cross-border supervision.

IMI Biweekly Forum (No. 12):

Impact of Silk Road Economic Belt on RMB internationalization

On May 25, IMI Biweekly Forum (No. 12) was held at Renmin University. The forum themed “Impact of Silk Road Economic Belt on RMB internationalization”, and IMI Deputy Director Tu Yonghong made a keynote speech. Ben Shenglin, IMI executive director, and Zhao Haiying, vice president of Central Huijin Investment Co., Ltd. attended the meeting.

Prof. Tu began her keynote by addressing the context of the Silk Road Economic Belt as a national strategy and of RMB internationalization. Her speech included four paths of facilitating RMB internationalization during the building of Silk Road Economic Belt, and “opportunities and challenges under the new paths and some suggestions”. She pointed out that the Silk Road Economic Belt brings four opportunities for RMB internationalization, which are RMB pricing and settlement in foreign trade, project financing and direct investment, currency swaps and offshore RMB market construction. At the same time, China also faces political, cultural and legal challenges. We can break through by using RMB in pricing and trade settlement, and expanding investment and loans. She said if two of them are ensured, RMB would become one of the major currencies in Asia.

IMI Biweekly Forum (No. 13): Analysis on Shadow Banking, Credit Expansion and Systemic Risk

On June 8, IMI Biweekly Forum (No. 13) was held at Culture Square, Renmin University. Professor Qu Qiang, deputy director of China Financial Policy Research Center, delivered a speech on "shadow banking, credit expansion and systemic risk". Zhang Zhixiang, IMI Academic Committee member and former director general of International Department of People's Bank of China hosted the meeting.

In his keynote speech, Professor Qu Qiang explored the definition of shadow banking, its scale and capital orientation from the perspective of analysis paradigm, its origin and definition, and its systemic risk. He pointed out that it is crucial that shadow banking has a clear risk-taking body, a stable "value anchor". Professor Qu then explained its credit expansion and mechanisms of self cycling, and gave his policy insights in addressing systemic risks.

IMI Biweekly Forum (No. 14): Media Sentiment and Inflation

On IMI Biweekly Forum (No. 14), June 29, Professor Zhang Chengsi from School of Finance of Renmin University delivered a speech on the political economy of media sentiment and contagion of inflation expectation. The speech was based on his recent paper which studies the inflation mechanism from the perspective of media sentiment and the role of public expectation in forming inflation.

The paper draws on the "spiral of silence" theory and infection model of epidemic diseases, and uses quantitative methods to analyze the impact of increasing social media comments about the price level on inflation. Whether the use of "spiral of silence" or "epidemiology", the paper underlines the infection mechanisms of media sentiments. Media sentiments have a significant, asymmetric contagion effect on public inflation expectation, and this asymmetry was reflected oppositely in the print media and network media. "Price reduction" reported by the print media is more contagious among public expectation, while in network media it is "price hiking".

IMI Biweekly Forum (No. 15):

The New Economic Norm and Combination of Industry and Finance

On September 28, IMI Biweekly Forum (No. 15) was held in Renmin University. Prof. Ben Shenglin, executive director of IMI, professor of Zhejiang University, was invited as the guest speaker. Prof. Zhang Jie, associate dean of School of Finance, director of IMI, presided over the forum.

Prof. Ben Shenglin delivered a speech entitled "The New Economic Norm and Combination of Industry and Finance". He pointed out that under the trend of informatization and globalization, the new economy has characteristics including differentiation, individualization, networking and high speed. New norm needs market selection mechanism and new ideas as well as developing a mature path for the new economic industry. In the meantime, the Chinese government should provide a good competition environment and stimulate industry's innovations in a proper way. He suggested that we need to develop multiple levels of equity investment and capital market; in addition to making sure of the matching of risks and benefits and to achieving the combination of industry and finance.

Former French Minister of Finance Mr. Edmond Alphandery Appointed as Member of IMI Advisory Board

On June 24, the third Salon of General Theory on Macrofinance was held at Room 801, Mingde Main Building, Renmin University.

At the beginning of the meeting, Zhang Jie, director of IMI, issued Letter of Appointment to advisory board member Mr. Edmond Alphandery, chairman of Euro50 Group, former French Minister of Finance. Subsequently, Mr. Edmond Alphandery delivered a speech the Dynamics of Fragmentation in the Euro Zone: Theory and Political Implications. Regarding the euro zone's economic performance since the European debt crisis, he believes that with the gradual recovery of economy, and restoration of investor's confidence and capital inflows, the euro zone is moving toward recovery. Then, he focuses on the status and function of the different financial markets. He points out that the integration of financial markets is a necessary but not sufficient condition to form a united currency area. Based on this analysis, he assesses the current process of integration in the euro zone. He believes that the euro zone faces three major challenges: lack of activity of productive sector; signs of polarization of north and south in euro zone; account imbalances of international payments, exchange rate abnormal fluctuation and deflation.
